THE MAKING OF SONS

LAWRENCE K. KIBET

Lawrence Kibet is a pastor and overseer of Christ Dominion Church in Nakuru, Kenya; with over 40 years of experience in leadership and teaching ministry both locally and internationally. He has served numerous churches in various capacities, and; also engaged in teaching, training, and administration in Bible colleges. He has faithfully remained focused on the teaching on sonship over the past 20 years, with this book being the results of the growth in the revelation of the Holy Spirit on sons of God. The other book, Sonship and Servanthood in the Kingdom covers in detail the conflict between son-mind and servant-mind in not only Church ministry but in the entire bible, and would also certainly interest every believer of Jesus Christ. Kibet is also a professor of economics at Egerton University with broad experience in research, consultancy, and teaching. He has good management experience as Chair of Economics Department and Dean of Faculty of Commerce. He has also served on various editorial boards of refereed international journals and widely published other books and journal papers.

A MUST READ

The originality behind this book is such that it clarifies some controversial questions in church ministry that many leaders have struggled with. The revelation herein attests to the fact that this is a special overflow of apostolic grace. This book uniquely teaches on the conflict of son-ship attitude and servant-hood attitude not only in the Church ministry but also in a family and nation. The identity of the sons of God has been clouded in a mix of conflicts of children and servants and intertwined in a confusion of works, grace, law, and faith. Apart from some initial perception as being radical or controversial, this book, shall hopefully reveal the stone of stumbling that has denied the church the real fellowship of dwelling in the Lord and, the true identity of the believer in the Heavenly Father. This book is not only essential for the youth but also parents, leaders, and scholars in religion and theology.
